“ My little Mammaw,

In my head I will try to persuade myself that you merely left a Kentucky Winter and headed to Daytona Beach, just like you've said you wanted to do many times over the years.

Thank you for letting me use your slippers on that very beach when I was little so my feet wouldn't burn walking across the sand. Yes, thank you even for persuading me to go into the ocean for my very first time ever by telling me you wouldn't let a wave crash over me. Then, only minutes later, we were both clobbered by a wave and I stomped angrily back to the beach.

Thank you for giving me a place to play with my magic "games", as you called them, and for being such enormous inspiration to everyone surrounding you.

Thank you for playing connect 4 with me after school; I know you let me win most of the time even though you would never admit it.

Thank you for the countless laughs and for tricking me into thinking you shoveled most of the driveway after a 22" snowstorm while I took a break from shoveling to build snow forts in the backyard. Upon my return to the driveway, you were at the very end of the drive scooping the last shovel of snow! Thank you for not admitting to me for a short time that neighbors had actually come over and finished it and you were playing a trick on me.

Thank you for always stuffing my belly with delicious food my entire life, even when I was often adamant that I was not hungry, but then ate more anyway because I couldn't resist.

At less than 5 feet tall, somehow you have always been larger than life and one of the biggest joys this world has ever seen.

Thank you for being my guiding light, my 2nd mom, and my friend, always.

Thank you is simply not enough.

I'll miss you more than anyone will ever know and more than I could ever explain.

I promise you that I will attempt to spread joy to the best of my ability the rest of my life, in your honor.

Enjoy the sunshine, sandy beaches and warm ocean breeze.

I love you Mammaw!
