“ I first met Mark in 1981 when he started working for me as a masonry helper. He was reliable and hard working. It didn't take long to realize that he could be an excellent mason. Once he got a trowel in his hand he proved me right. He was the best man I ever taught to lay brick. We stayed friends after he went into business for himself. Whenever he needed extra work he was welcome to come back for however long he needed. We stayed in contact after I retired and would reminisce about old times regularly. He was a good friend who I'll miss very much. Good-bye old friend.
